

Narbonne Graduates Move Behind Scenes to Check Work

Across the nation today many millions of young men and women between 18 and 21 are wishing that just once the voting age would be lowered so they might express their views in the difficult world of politics.

Two young ladies took advantage of their opportunity to see a small part of that difficult world when they visited the Biltmore Hotel, headquarters of the 1960 Democratic National Convention last week.

THE GIRLS, Judy Armington and Lynn Welch, are both graduates of Narbonne High School in Lomita. Their impressions are not only a few of the many impressions of today's 18-21 year olds, they can be said to be typical.

"Intelligent citizens are informed citizens" is a remark frequently utilized though seldom regarded," Lynn enthusiastically remarked, "Just by viewing the convention site and some of the people behind the scenes, the young, eager politician is well on his way or her way to becoming informed."

VOID OF ANY press cards, the two girls were admitted to the press conference room of Sen. John Kennedy, now the Democratic standard bearer. Though the Senator was not present, the girls still learned much about behind-the-scenes politics.

Judy and Lynn also reported on the Young Democratic Club of America. Their description of the club and its activities is a concise summary of the purpose of the club. "This organization seeks to educate young voters in order that they may take an active interest in politics and public affairs, and to affiliate with and become members of the Democratic party."

The girls were both given manuals on how to start clubs with such a purpose in their own town or neighborhood. THE GIRLS also learned much about the behind-the-scenes coverage given the convention by the many television networks. They were able to see for themselves, too, that the convention is a lot more than the public might realize. Arrangements must be made for rooms, press rooms, conference areas, and entertainment.
